Bomb threat empties school

Police have no clues to the identity of the person who telephoned Romulus High School last week during a dance and told one teacher that a bomb had been planted in the gymnasium.

The call precipitated the evacuation by police and fire personnel of more than 50 dancers plus an unidentified number of adult education students present in the building at approximately 8:50 p.m. March 27.

After a superficial search of the gym, police and fire workers found no evidence to support the call.

Lt. Ken Kraus, chief of detectives for Romulus police, later dismissed the episode as a prank.

County residents favor elimination of drain office

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

More than 30 residents of Huron Township turned out for a public hearing designed to capture local support for the elimination of the office of Wayne County drain commissioner. Most testified that they were in favor of such a move.

The hearing, sponsored by the Committee on Public Services, an arm of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, was the second of its kind.

In all, more than 100 Wayne County residents attended the hearing staged at the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Services Building in Wayne March 25.

Spearheaded by Commissioners Milt Mack and John Hertel, the campaign for the elimination of the office currently held by Charles Youngblood is more than one year old.

"It was very encouraging as far as building support for the ballot proposal," Mack said. "People from Huron, Sumpter, Van Buren, Allen Park and Lincoln Park turned out to voice their disapproval with the drain commissioner's office."

April 10 is the targeted date for the Committee on Public Services to vote on the measure to place the choice of retaining the office of drain commissioner on the August 1986 primary election ballot.

"I expect the committee will vote then to discharge the proposal and forward it to the full commission for consideration," said Mack. "I think if the public is made aware that the issue is on the ballot, it will pass by an overwhelming majority. But the public has to know that this is on the ballot."

Most residents who attended the meeting were already in support of the proposal and testified to their encounters with Youngblood's office.

Claudia Kirpatrick, a New Boston resident who originally petitioned Youngblood's office to clean the Vandicar Drain located in Huron Township, said she went to the meeting because of the improprieties she felt stemmed from that office.

"I'm all in favor of eliminating the office," she explained. "I think it's about time."

Kirpatrick was assessed $3,200 in cleaning charges for the portion of the Vandicar Drain that runs through her 40 acres of land.

"But it's not even finished yet," she claimed. "I asked Milt when he thought it would be finished and he said as long as Youngblood was drain commissioner, it probably never would be."

Youngblood came under fire in 1985 after his office charged residents $232,000 to clean 1.7 miles of the Vandicar Drain. More than $54,000 was spent in engineering expenses.

By comparison, 1.2 miles of the drain was cleaned by Huron Township with federal money.

Airport, DNR officials expected City to sponsor meeting on ethylene glycol

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

City officials, in an effort to resolve the persisting problem of an airport chemical spill into a city storm drain, have scheduled an open meeting at 7 p.m. April 7 in the council chambers.

"We're hoping to address the existing situation although we've not been involved in it before," said Mayor Beverly McAnally. "We're going on the general idea that everybody is concerned and nobody has any complained of a noxious odor coming from the drain, a smell, they said, that they've been detecting for nearly a decade.

"We've experienced the biggest discomfort from it," McAnally said. "All the communities have to be concerned clear down to Lake Erie. There is a dual concern in that in spite of the odor, we are very anxious to see that all safety precautions are being followed for aircraft."

"But technology has got to reflect some better method of handling this."

City officials are hoping to attract more than just Romulus residents.

Mayor Pro Tem Mary Ann Banks, who called for the informational meeting, said that she hopes to see residents from Taylor and the downriver areas present.

"People are complaining now and these are the same people who have been bothered by this smell for years," she said. "I feel as though this meeting is as much for (officials) to find out just what is going on at the airport."

Ordinance director, Steve Banko, said that residents affected by the odor will be notified by mail of the impending meeting. He added that he will telephone other city officials who deal with the drain.

"We've never been invited to any communications between the airport and the DNR before," Banko said. "This will be a first for Romulus and it's about time we set up something to let the people know that we're concerned. It's time to let the airport answer questions."

Last week, Tim Jaski, a DNR water quality control specialist said that the chemical posed a danger to water quality and aquatic life.

A DNR spokesperson Monday said that no citation had been issued for airport violations but that a notice of non-compliance had been issued.

That notice did not carry any penalties but instead urged remedial measures, he said.

According to Banko, the city does not have the money or the resources needed to demand compliance by the airport. Nor does it have any ordinances that address chemical releases by the facility.

"We just don't have the money to do a lot of the tests to verify the findings," Banko said. "That's what the DNR is for - they're supposed to follow up on our complaints and ensure that state laws are being adhered to."

"(The DNR) is supposed to be out there protecting us and they're saying the worst thing about it is the odor."

One resident, Karen Dillon, who has waged a 10-year battle with the DNR and airport to rid the community of the threat of ethylene glycol as well as the odor, was pleased at the announcement of the meeting.

"I think there is strength in numbers," she said. "This is certainly encouraging."

Hargrove sentenced to 15-50 years in jail

Longpre's body was found in the trunk of her car by Romulus police shortly after she failed to return home from her Canton K-Mart job where she apparently punched out at 9:30 p.m.

According to testimony, Hargrove, Edwards and Price had participated in kidnapping Longpre in an attempt to rob

An Inkster man convicted March 17 of kidnapping and attempted robbery in the death of a Westland woman was sentenced to 15 to 50 years in prison.

Juan Hargrove, 20, one of three people charged with the murder of Patricia Longpre, 34, Sept. 12, could have received life imprisonment.

her by driving her to an isolated spot on Henry Ruff Road in Romulus.

After discovering 16 cents in her purse, Edwards ordered her into the trunk of her car after which he doused the interior with gasoline and set it on fire.

Police said Longpre died of smoke inhalation.

Two other men involved, Ronald Edwards, 17 and Dennis Lee Price, 33 have already undergone court trials.

Edwards was sentenced to be placed under the juvenile court system until he is 19 years old. Price, whose jury trial lasted two days and concluded March 25, was found guilty of felony murder, armed robbery and arson.

Sentencing for Price is scheduled for April 8.

Accreditation study cites 2 violations at high school

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

At least two violations of standards at the high school have been cited by a local accreditation team, according to information released by the Bureau of Accreditation and School Improvement Studies.

Notice of the two violations were released by the University of Michigan, which sponsors high school accreditation studies: One for failure to maintain a minimum number of library-media specialists and adult aides; and one for failure to certify by the state teachers employed by the school.

Both violations are currently being examined by the Romulus School Board. A special study session is scheduled for April 7 to study the problems, said Kenneth Berlinn, president of the board.

"We're well aware of the fact that violations have been noted," said Berlinn. "At this time, we've not decided how we plan to correct the situation."

Berlinn added that more media specialists will be added to the high school library staff.

According to Connie Jo Craft, associate director for the accreditation bureau, the high school currently employs one specialist.

Craft added that she received information from the school 1985-86 annual report.

"They need two specialists and one aide, according to my calculations," Craft said. "If (the school) wants to be acce-dated by U of M, it will have to match our standards."

In a more serious violation of standards, Craft said, the method in which the school is operating the ROTC program is in question.

Apparently, the high school is considering counting ROTC classes as science or social studies credit, Craft said.

If that happens, State of Michigan certified teachers would have to be recruited to conduct the course.

Berlinn said that currently, ROTC classes are conducted by retired Navy personnel.

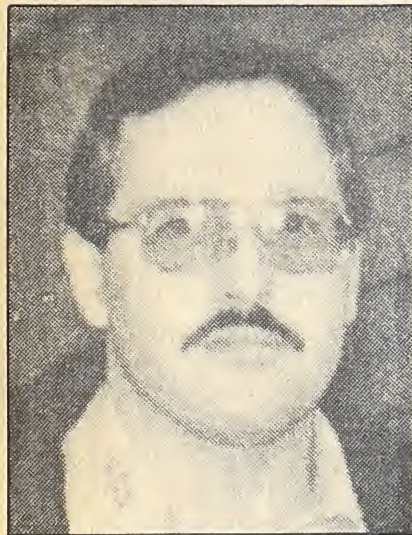

"We'll have to discuss that situation at our next meeting," he said. "I can't give any specific information yet but we do consider the situation serious."

"If it's true they are getting ready to offer ROTC as science or social studies and they don't use qualified teachers, certainly it can be considered not only a violation of U of M standards but State of Michigan standards as well," said Craft.

Accreditation is a method employed by most schools in the state to evaluate curriculum, staff, teaching methods and extra-curricular activities are well-rounded and lead to excellence in studies.

Very few schools exempt themselves from accreditation, Craft said.

Romulus schools are also accredited by North Central Accreditation, a regional accrediting team. Before the high school receives a passing grade from North Central, it must first pass U of M standards.

Steve Banko

real answers to the problem." Invited to the meeting are representatives from the Department of Natural Resources and the airport.

A DNR spokesperson said at least two representatives will attend the meeting.

Robert Braun, deputy director of airport relations and Ali Abbass, airport environmental director, will also be present, according to Abbass.

The chemical, ethylene glycol, is routinely used to de-ice planes at Metropolitan Airport. It is similar in composition to auto anti-freeze, a DNR spokesperson said.

In one of the more recent incidents, the chemical flowed into an airport retention pond that was already overflowing due to spring thaw.

Water mixed with ethylene glycol then flowed into the Frank and Poet Drain, which runs through Romulus, Taylor, Gibraltar, Trenton and Riverview, ending in Lake Erie.

Local teacher preaches appreciation for outdoor living

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

Bill Thomas is a teacher. Not the ordinary kind, though. He likes to dress-up and he likes to use visual aids to help get across his ideas to students.

So on some days, students who are enrolled in his outdoor education course at Romulus

Junior High are treated with a special "character" of Thomas' - Quemahoning, meaning "coming from a grove of trees." They also sometimes can be found peeking under rocks or making fire with a glass plate.

A quick glance at Thomas and one is easily reminded of a hearty pine or at least something derived from nature.

Born on the banks of the Quenmahoning River in Pennsylvannia 43 years ago, Thomas, somewhat of a Jeremiah Johnson of the South, claims his roots and his reasons for his classroom behavior are from a grandfather who taught him how to talk and listen to the land.

"Basically, what I am and what I do . . . as a buck skinner comes from my grandfather," Thomas recalled. "He gave me my first muzzle-loading rifle 30-some years ago. Quemahoning is what I was as a child."

More recently, since the inception of his outdoor living class, Thomas is committed to presenting a living history of the outdoors to kids.

"It's not just an outdoor class," he said. "It's educating kids about the outdoors. Kids today are turning more and more into homebodies. I'm trying to change all that."

Quickly explaining that he does not try to turn every student into an independent outdoors fan, Thomas added that if he could make his students more aware of their surroundings, then his goal will have been accomplished.

Having taught the class for only one year, he said it's difficult to determine yet how successful his class has been based upon grade averages or student enrollment.

"But I have had full classes of 30 or so students so far and the kids seem to like what I teach them," he said.

Thomas said he is "not trying to build a Rambo-type mentality" among students in his class (that, he contended, is not what the outdoor education is about).

"I want to orientate them to the outdoors, make them more resourceful on their own.

"Give a man a fish, feed him for a day," he said, quoting an ancient proverb. "Teach him to fish, feed him for a lifetime."

With that in mind, Thomas teaches his kids how to fish, how to construct shelters and how to cook in the outdoors.

After an initial seven-day orientation program, where he explains the functions of a compass, Thomas embarks on a 10-week session to create pseudo-survivalists.

than 200 to participate by the end of the first year.

Thomas received his bachelor degree from West Virginia University ("a kind of an outdoor school") and his master's degree in outdoor education from Michigan State.

He was, everyone admitted, more than qualified to teach the first-ever course at the junior high after a leg injury prevented him from continuing pass, Thomas embarks on a 10-week session to create pseudo-survivalists.

This April 11, the day set aside for the culmination of a semester of learning, Thomas will adorn himself with the trappings of "Quemahoning", take his students out onto the school grounds and begin an adventure in primitive living.

"We'll set up a teepee, the kids will cook an old dutch treat called a funnel cake and they will put to use what they've learned this year," he explained.

Thomas has also approached the board of education about approving a trip to Camp Storer in Jackson, Mich., where he will take students on a week-long adventure through the outdoors in May.

In addition to basic outdoor survival and an appreciation of nature, Thomas teaches a water safety course on dry land. So far, he said, 153 kids have enrolled and he expects more in physical education.

"Originally, I wanted to be a forester," he said. "But once I got to college, I decided to become an educator."

Apparently, it was a choice well made. Thomas has made somewhat of a dent in the routine of school and has qualified himself as a character, both among students and staff.

He is looking toward increasing the kind of outdoor activities open to students and his hoping, he said, to expand his course to include others in the field.

"I'm not keeping my ambitions a secret," he said, laughing. "The resources, the people are there. Education itself is so trendy but the outdoors, well, that's something that will always be around. What I learned from my studies in other areas I've had a hard time figuring out how to apply. Learning about the outdoors doesn't leave you wondering how to use it."

Bill Thomas has been in teaching for more than 20 years but admitted that instructing students in his outdoor living class really hits home the hardest. Thomas was raised in the woods of Pennsylvania where his grandfather taught him how to appreciate and understand the outdoors. He tries, he said, to instill the same kind of independence in his classroom students.

Drain commissioner's office

The cost, in that case, was less than $46,000. Outside engineering costs were less than $2,500.

Huron Township Supervisor Ralph Dugan contacted Mack's office shortly after the assessments were sent to homeowners and asked for his intervention.

Some residents, he said, had been assessed as much as $10,000 in drain cleaning costs.

"When I look at how our people have been ripped-off on drain assessments, I say it's time we eliminate the office," he said. "It's a many-headed monster left over from the days before the county was reorganized. What this county needs now is one man who can be held accountable."

The Vandicar Drain assessments were subsequently suspended pending a full investigation by the board of commissioners into the practices and levying procedures of the drain commissioner.

Mack has made no secret of his distaste for the drain commissioner's office.

"The people in Wayne County have grown used to being over-assessed," he said. "Once the taxpayers realize their complaints are being listened to, they will start to come forward and voice their support for the measure."

Mack has called that office a "rotten burro" of county politics.

Because, he said, Youngblood's office is an elected position, Wayne County residents, by virtue of name recognition, have routinely voted him into office.

"In order to run against someone who is running on a county-wide basis, you'd have to spend a lot of money," Mack said. "It's especially difficult when that person is an incumbent. For someone to run against (Youngblood), they'd have to compete on the basis of a presidential election."

Festivities planned for cagers

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

Now that the roar of victory has died down in the city and particularly at the high school, plans are in the making to commemorate the first-ever capture of the state championship title by the Romulus basketball team.

"We're all very proud and we want to make sure we do something to remember this," said Mary Ann Banks, the city council mayor pro-tem.

Two resolutions, one honoring the basketball team and one congratulating center Terry Mills, were drafted by the city council in an effort to demonstrate appreciation and support.

In addition to the traditional sports banquet, plans are underway to include team members in the Michigan Week festivities in May.

"I think we are planning on asking them to be the grand marshalls of the parade," said Mayor Beverly McAnally. "There will be many observances to commemorate this event."

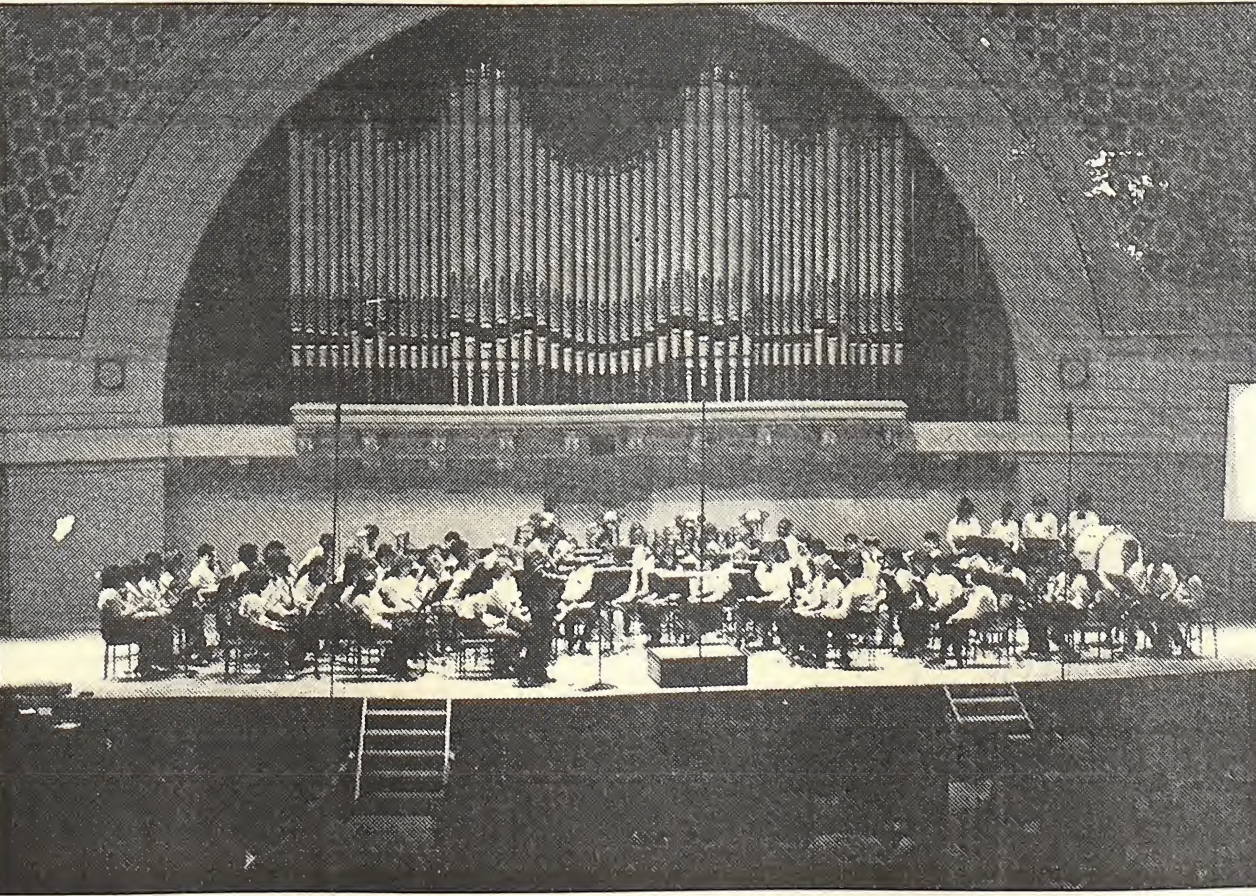

The team members will not only be paraded among fans and officials during Michigan Week but will see their team name posted around the perimeter of the city.

Also considered is the addition of signs to the city parks indicating team member's names so that each child playing in the parks can be "inspired" the Romulus basketball team's win, according to Banks.

Said Romulus High School principal Al Sheffield, "It was a very pleasant change from the normal negative remarks we get about Romulus. We hope this is not a once-in-a-lifetime thing but the publicity we've gotten is something Romulus really deserves."

Sheffield said official team photos will be displayed in the school lobby.

The Romulus Junior High symphonic band recently participated in a band clinic at the University of Michigan's Hill Auditorium. The symphonic band received a "I" or superior rating from all four judges at a district junior high band festival.

All four Romulus school bands received the coveted first division ratings at the festival, establishing several school records, according to music department head Richard Kruse.

More than 300 Romulus students participated in the festival consisting of 16 junior high bands and more than 1,000 band members.

Romulus police nab Inkster man

By RALPH WELTON
ANP Staff Writer

An Inkster man is in custody for the alleged abduction, rape, and attempted murder of his girlfriend on March 17. Paul Boone, 28, was arrested in Romulus on March 25 after evading police for a week. He has been arraigned on charges of burglary, abduction, first degree criminal sexual assault, assault with intent to commit murder and felony firearm use. Bail has been set at $100,000. He is also being held on an unrelated assault charge. Bail for that charge is set at $50,000.

The whole bizarre event apparently stems from a complaint filed by the victim, Garnetta McIntosh, 30, after repeatedly being harrassed by Boone. According to police reports, Boone came to McIntosh's home on Walnut Street on the evening of March 17, but was refused admittance by McIntosh's grandparents, Zellie and Almeta Blackmon.

Boone then gained entry to the home by breaking into a basement window. McIntosh, who was naked at the time, confronted Boone in the kitchen of the house with a .410 shotgun. Boone disarmed her and ordered her to dress. In an interview with police, McIntosh claims that she wrestled with Boone until her grandparents retreated to their bedroom, where they locked themselves in and called police.

Boone then dragged McIntosh by the throat to an awaiting car which was occupied by at least two other men. They drove around in the car, a 1977 green Thunderbird, eventually ending up in an alley off Woodward in Highland Park.

It was at this time, according to McIntosh, that Boone ordered McIntosh to remove her pants, and holding a pistol to her head, proceeded to rape her in the alley. After the assault, Boone reportedly told McIntosh: "Garnetta, I love you, but I gotta kill you for what you did."

It was at this point, claims McIntosh, that Boone shot her in the back of the head. Although stunned, McIntosh attempted to fight Boone off. He then shot her five more times. All six shots hit her in the head, several passing through her forearms as she attempted to shield herself.

Police reports indicate that McIntosh played dead and Boone and his accomplices walked away. When the suspects were out of sight, McIntosh claims she crawled away and hid in a vacant building. One of the suspects, Frankie Butler, reportedly returned to the scene and noticed McIntosh was gone, at which point the suspects escaped in the car.

McIntosh stumbled out into the street where she collapsed. Highland Park police arrived on the scene and McIntosh was transported to Henry Ford Hospital, where she was listed in temporary serious condition by Dr. Philip Canon.

Boone was arrested on a fugitive warrant at the Oakbrook Apartments in Romulus and taken into custody by Inkster police. Police are still seeking two black male suspects in the incident, Alger Lucky and Frankie Butler.

Romulus has good traits, too

Once again Romulus is in the news. The difference, this time, however, is the stuff of which to write home about.

Gone for a brief, shining moment were the damaging, uncomplimentary comments about life, and death, in Romulus when the boys on the Romulus High School basketball team made it to the state finals, and, as if that wasn't enough, captured the coveted state championship title.

It isn't enough to say that all of us, even outside Romulus were . . . still are, proud. Anything that happens for the first time in the history of Romulus schools and in the history of the area deserves the longest, most articulate praise.

And they are getting it – the young men on the team, Coach Al Wilkerson, Terry Mills and the schools.

More importantly, Romulus is getting some positive attention.

Sure, the city has gotten its share of "bad press" lately and to be sure, everybody has heard of the city with the airport smack in the middle of town by now.

But this time the news is different.

This time, Romulus can and should stand tall and promulgate all the good the basketball team has created by its championship win.

Few cities receive such an honor. Even fewer have been plagued by numerous incidents that tear away at the level of pride and satisfaction communities have in their towns.

Romulus has been one of those communities where lately the bad has been displayed and all the good diminished by the too-frequent bad news.

For the first time in a long time, Romulus officials and residents are holding up their heads in a show of pride. There were no killings, except on the basketball court, there were no embarrassing gun-toting student incidents to push under the covers in the hope that the controversy would die down.

What happened Saturday, March 22 was the proverbial shot in the arm that Romulus needed to continue as a thriving, growing metropolis for world travelers and ordinary citizens.

Perhaps the boys on the team will never again experience the adulation received from capturing the title. But the name of Terry Mills will remain on our minds for many years to come. He deserves the recognition and the honor as do each and every member of that historic team.

These young men not only achieved athletic superiority in our state but they also made a valuable contribution to the city.

Inadvertently, they promulgated Romulus into the public eye, and for the first time in a while, Romulus shined in a favorable light. It is a city of champions.

And the city council is justifiably considering placing signs around the city to commemorate our state championship team. Maybe now those from outside Romulus will have something about which to be wistful.

Now a weary traveler just off the plane at Metro airport can glance up at the signs posted around the city and be made aware of the Romulus importance in the field of basketball.

Even better, maybe some young prospective Terry Mills will be dribbling a basketball in one of the city parks and be reminded of the 1986 team.

Maybe then, that young dribbler will have something nice to tell his friends about his city.

If we can start them off young, maybe those older folks who speak ill of Romulus will soon fade away as Romulus prepares for future shining moments.

Japanese can teach a lesson

In the era of Japanese auto import limits and a feeling that unemployment is "made in Japan," Canton Township welcomed with open arms a Japanese auto parts supply firm last week and city officials and residents alike should be commended.

Yazaki, a multi-national corporation that produces harnesses for many car manufacturers, entered the city on a positive note, one promising growth, increased jobs and neighborly hospitality. Canton city officials reacted in a most friendly manner eager to see the business grow in this near-booming community.

While a feeling of pride is being felt in Canton, a feeling of animosity is being also displayed by other residents in the Detroit area. Many auto workers feel that the Japanese business methods and operations have hurt the U.S. economy and employment picture, contentions that are short-sighted and lack the real American philosophy of free enterprise.

To knock the Japanese for their effective production routines is like knocking an American baseball team upon their victory at the World's Series.

To say the Japanese are wrong in locating plants within the U.S. or to want to compete within our American market is like saying America was wrong in reaching to the moon and exploring new horizons.

Instead of continually tearing down and discrediting what these clever business people have to offer, our challenge should be to learn the techniques of efficient production, learn the feeling of pride in the workplace and learn how to remain competitive in the free world.

Canton residents have taken the first step toward economic growth and educational prosperity by accepting this company into their community with arms widely stretched. As neighbors, Yazaki and the business area can grow with each other. As neighbors, Yazaki and the township can prosper economically. And as neighbors, Yazaki and the people can begin to learn that the Japanese really are on to something and can begin to listen and learn instead of shut out and protest.

Canton Township has taken the first step in ensuring continued world trade relations and residents will, in turn, be rewarded four fold.

Yazaki is to be welcomed to Canton, Mich., U.S.A. and township leaders and residents are to be commended on a move that will brighten the future for all of us.

Don't muzzle the press

You can't keep a short leash and a muzzle on a watchdog. If you do, you have turned him into a pet or a lap dog. Your watchdog is no longer your guardian and protector.

The analogy of the watchdog was used recently by Robert Lewis, national president of the Society of Professional Journalists in a speech given to the Detroit Chapter of Delta Sigma Chi. Lewis refers, of course, to the national media as the watchdog of the rights and liberties of all Americans and sees a potential danger to the national watchdog in threats to muzzle the media.

In response to this, the society is preparing Project Watchdog, an educational program on the free press, to celebrate the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution in 1987. The project, estimated to cost a minimum of $350,000, will involve chapters across the nation in the effort to educate the public on its first amendment rights.

The educational program is a needed one as evidenced by a recent poll which showed that 75 percent of the Americans surveyed (about one-half of them college graduates) did not know the first amendment to the constitution.

We, as Americans, may have assumed that the right of freedom of the press was included in the constitution as a special gift to an admired press. It was not so, Lewis told the assembled journalists. It was included along with the freedom of speech, freedom of religion and the rights of petition and assembly as a guarantee that the precious freedoms written in the Bill of Rights would not be eroded away. Then, as now, government leaders would have liked a "public relations" press – one that reflected their values, views and policies. There was in 1787, as today, the danger that in the pages of the free press there would be disagreement, debate and even denunciations of the policies of the government. Yet, the founding fathers of this country granted freedom of the press with full knowledge that the watchdog would be on guard and ready to protect the rights of the citizens from any group or entity who sought to destroy those privileges – even from representatives of the government who had bestowed those rights.

In the Virginia Bill of Rights, which predates the amendments to the U.S. Constitution, it is stated "that the freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty and can never be restrained but by the depostick (sic) governments."

On the community level, the press works for its readers by attending meetings of committees, commissions, boards and councils as well as covering the courts, fire and police departments to observe and record first-hand what is happening. The press notes the arguments of the dissenters as well as the supporters and offers the reader the opportunity to make choices on his or her own with the information provided. Writers also provide in-depth background and interviews on important issues and editorial writers express their personal views on subjects of concern to the community in the only place in the newspaper where we can appropriately state our own views – on the opinion pages. The press forewarns the public on proposed taxes and bonding issues and describes projects which are still in the planning stages in time for the public to voice their opinions and to help mold the decisions.

The community newspaper does not often have a "Watergate" to report and there are few dramatic first amendment issues for it to champion, but there are times when we can score small victories for the public – and, that is what being a watchdog is about.

As a reporter for a community newspaper a few years ago, I received several phone calls from concerned senior citizens. They told me a meeting of the city planning commission was scheduled and they feared the plans for their low-cost, high-rise apartment would be nixed. City officials had previously told me that the high-rise would be more timely in five years or more. A tearful elderly woman asked me how they could expect a 73-year-old person to wait 5 years for housing. I went to the meeting the next evening, but as I entered the chambers there was a call for adjournment. I left, but I learned the following morning that the meeting had been reconvened after I left and the high-rise project had been turned down. My story in the community newspaper reported the facts and, in response, another meeting was scheduled – this time an open meeting in the true sense. The decision was reversed and within a few months there was a groundbreaking for the high-rise.

Romulus wrestler tackles flooding

To The Editor:

We live on Anchor Bay of Lake St. Clair in New Baltimore, Mich. This is about one hour northeast of the Romulus area. This year we are experiencing the highest lake levels in 100 years and are facing flood waters.

This weekend, six of the boys on the Romulus High School wrestling team (under Coach Schimming), volunteered their time to help us fill sandbags and build a flood dyke on our property. We would like to thank Ralph Farrell, Charlie Crosby, Paul Nowicki, Tony Venturini, Craig Stewart and Dennis Corder for their efforts. It was greatly appreciated.

To The Editor:

I am writing to you after reading story after story of budget cuts, millage, seemingly hopeless situations, etc. At this point I'd like to speak as a mother, a woman, a taxpayer, a homeowner and a vocational center student. I'd like to ask: Why doesn't someone do a story on all the behind the scenes, hard-work, sweat and tears that are being devoted day after long tiring day by some of our very special and unrewarded but dedicated staff?

My best example is Mr. Richard Pray, he is our irreplaceable graphics arts instructor at the William D. Ford Vocational Center. I have been attending classes only since January, but have watched in disbelief the grace with which he handles unbelievable pressures put upon him day and Under Public Act 3 of 1985, Michigan's Displaced Homemakers Act was extended through Oct. 1, 1991. The Displaced Homemakers Act provides important services and resources to homemakers who are left unemployed and without a means of support due to separation from their spouse because of death, divorce or disability.

The law enacted last year is based upon a public act first established in 1978. The so-called "Fitzgerald-Elliott Act" of that year went a long way toward establishing vital services that help in educating people to support themselves and their families. Many times, homemakers caught in the predicament of having to suddenly fend for themselves, lack marketable skills or the necessary prior work experience.

The program provides job training, counseling and special services to homemakers so they will be able to successfully seek employment.

Originally scheduled to expire in September 1983, the program was extended to April 1985 so that the Legislature might evaluate the act's cost-effectiveness.

The Legislature discovered that the Displaced Homemakers Act is not only cost-effective, but it also successfully addresses many of the serious employment problems facing those homemakers who must enter the work force by who do not have the necessary skills.

Accordingly, the Legislature went on to approve Public Act 3 of 1985. Besides extending the program's ending date, the law deletes provisions that require an annual evaluation of the program by the state auditor general.

A periodic audit of the state Department of Labor by the office will be sufficient to ensure that funds for the displaced homemakers program are properly spent.

Continuation of this valuable program is also a continuation of hope for people who suddenly training and educational deficiencies, a rebounding economy will not likely be enough to correct their situation.

That's why I support the concept of offering training and educational programs that will help displaced homemakers help themselves. In this area of Michigan there are at least three privately-operated programs to assist displaced homemakers. These are in Ann Arbor, Ecorse and Livonia and can be contacted at the following telephone numbers: 967-0500 (Ann Arbor), 843-2550 (Ecorse), and 591-6400 (Livonia).

night, day after day, from 7:30 every morning, to sometimes very late into the night, and even on weekends.

He is patronized constantly by anxious and impatient fellow workers, students, former students, other school staff and who knows who else, with orders that HAVE to be done yesterday, tomorrow or even today, right NOW! He works with one of his "crews" and accomplishes the impossible, with constant problems, broken promises and misplaced requests for parts to repair much needed equipment that has sat for month waiting, totally useless.

Space is very limited, lighting poor, textbooks scarce, adequate supplies short, and although he was promised an assistant last September, to help keep him from trying to spread himself so thin in order that everyone has a chance to learn, it has never materialized. Still, he has an impeccable record of accomplishment. If a student has enough interest to want to learn, and tries, you can be sure that Dick Pray will do all he can to see that he or she makes it.

He helps them find jobs and lends his own moral support, encouragement and advice to all. Students that have been out of his class for years, still call or return for help and advice, and he is always there, always has a spare minute for them. No one hesitates to run to him for that last-minute printing job, but no one ever seems to take the time to let him know how much he's appreciated. No one remembers those broken part, lost orders, the free labor and 12 hour days and nights.

Wouldn't it be nice if everyone that came to him for a favor got together and let him know how much he is appreciated? If they somehow found a way to help repair some of the equipment and improve the facilities that so many take for granted? While he is only one of many dedicated teachers in our school district, I'm sure he is one that has in some way touched almost all of the other schools and faculty, from the Franklin Flyer to the Hoover Menu, from test papers to teacher forms, from duplicated textbooks to senior citizens newsletters. There is an endless list.

Surely his dedication and devotion to so many deserves some reward, certainly not another "budget cut"! He is a very warm and caring person, a financial wizard, carries the financial burdens of the other underfunded training programs and still manages to keep the department's head "above water." If he were to channel his talents instead for his own personal use, and benefit, we would be without his unique selflessness, and he, undoubtedly, would be a very well off businessman, with normal hours and a lot more to show for his endeavors than an underpaid, overworked and very dedicated teacher.

I, personally, am proud and grateful to be a member of one of his classes, and look forward to my son having him for a teacher, too, in a couple of years. My "hat" is off to him, and may heart goes out to his wife and family. I know that I speak for countless others when I say thank you! Somehow it doesn't seem like enough, but I know that he understands.

Press

The story received no awards or special recognition, and it probably received little attention from anyone other than those involved, but it is an example of the hundreds and thousands of little stories that are written every day by watchdogs of the rights of the public.

Do we sometimes bark up the wrong tree? Do we sometimes snap at the heels of someone we shouldn't have? Yes, just as elected and appointed officials sometimes make errors of judgement and pursue the wrong courses. But, nonetheless, when there is a threat to our freedoms - whether a local one or a national one - there is a comfort in knowing that the watchdog is on guard.

Let us as watchdogs not be arrogant and abusive of our powers, but use them responsibly, honestly, carefully and with the professionalism. Let us as representatives of the free press pursue our duties with integrity so that there is no call to muzzle us or to put us on a short leash.

100 years ago today

100 Years Ago This Week
Just as it was written in the Belleville Enterprise . . . March 31, 1886, Vol. I, No. 4

In observation of the 100th birthday of the Belleville Enterprise this year, Park Gregory, noted historian and writer from the Belleville-Van Buren area, prepares this column weekly. Excerpts from the original newspaper 100 years ago are provided along with brief explanations when necessary.

Last Friday evening Music Hall was filled with an enthusiastic crowd who had assembled for the express purpose of showing their loyalty to the memory of our dead heroes who fell while defending their country's flag. The audience were first treated to a fine literary program and then commenced the work of the evening, viz. forming an association, electing officers, appointing committees, etc. J.M. Cody presided over the meeting of the evening and was afterward elected president of the association. This gentleman was the starter of the scheme and a great deal of credit is due Mr. C. for his untiring efforts in making this meeting a decided success. A call for money was extended to all and the hearty generous way in which people went down into their pockets showed the deep interest they took in this matter and now they have started it they are bound to see it through. In this manner $56.75 was raised in a few minutes.

The State Normal School (EMU) is to have a large pipe organ erected in its chapel during spring vacation. This with the many other convenient fixtures makes it almost a rival of the University. (The organ was on the third floor of old Pierce Hall. It was still there, but not used in the early 1940s. Old Pierce was later razed.)

Cold north-east winds seem to prevail this spring but it will be remembered that the wind was in that quarter on the 20th of March so look out for a cold spring.

Moon and Cady (hardware) have just received several new oil stoves with the latest patent combination burner. They are something new and entirely different from anything ever before invented. They would be pleased to show you these goods whether you wish to invest or not.

H. Raymond will commence carrying the mail from Rawsonville to Ypsilanti and return tomorrow April 1st. Anyone can ride to or from Belleville for a very nominal sum.

If you want to get the news take the ENTERPRISE for we have not time to come to your house to rehearse the news. If you know anything that we don't please tell us so that we can inform somebody else.

Died: At her home south-east of Belleville on Wednesday, March 24th, of child birth, Mrs. Wm. Howland aged 25 years.

It is requested that notices of all deaths be sent to us as it is much easier for your friends to find it out through this medium than any other.

After election is over we must begin to think about incorporation. Other towns no larger than this one govern themselves, and why not we? (The citizens of Belleville voted down incorporation in April of 1905 but got incorporation in May in spite of the vote.)

The Democrats of Van Buren Township for the coming election have nominated: Franklin Robbe for supervisor, Henry Fehlig for clerk and John W. Clark for treasurer.

A holiday exodus

Travelers take to the planes

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Morning sunshine, chirping birds and the green of the grass are all sure signs that spring has finally arrived for most people. But for workers in the travel industry, the annual exodus away from the metro Detroit area is obvious proof.

Beverly Powell, manager of Adventure Travel in Belleville, reported that March, early April and Easter is the time when winter-weary Detroiters venture away from the Michigan climate and seek the beaches and sunshine of Florida, California and Hawaii. In fact, Powell said that this time of year can be compared only to the Christmas holiday in terms of business volume.

"This is one of the biggest seasons for us. Easter and Spring Break kind of run together," Powell said. "Mainly right now it's Florida, but we have people going to California and Hawaii."

This year, the airline industry has given area travelers an added incentive to leave the area due to the air fare price wars. According to Powell, the airline industry has been offering unprecedented prices recently, with some companies going so low that traveling by air has become cheaper than doing so by car.

The price war stems from governmental deregulation of the airline industry, Powell said, and should continue indefinitely. The federal government had previously regulated air fares telling the airlines where planes could fly and when. Now, however, Powell added, with the elimination of the Civil Aeronautics Board, the governmental agency that had the authority to regulate airlines, airlines are allowed to use price breaks and added flights as an edge in the highly competitive industry.

Nevertheless, these "low prices" that sometimes seem too good to be true are just that, warned Powell.

"With the air fares being as cheap as they are, the prices can change every day," she said.

The travel agent urged potential travelers to book flights early, most times to the tune of at least six months. In addition, she warned that many travelers should understand all the stipulations with the low prices which many times prohibits cancellation, regulates on which days people may travel as well as reserving the right to change the flight time at any moment.

Powell also explained that many customers don't understand the difference between regularly scheduled airlines and charter tours. According to the travel expert, when taking a charter, the low prices should be weighed against some of the disadvantages.

"When you have reservations for a scheduled flight, they can handle you. They can switch you even to another airline if they have a delay," Powell explained. "If you book a charter, you're stuck with the charter. If they have a time change, you're stuck with what they offer you."

"With the air fares being as cheap as they are, the prices can change every day."

— Beverly Powell

Even with tickets prices being as low as $138 to Orlando, Fla., and equally economical for travel to the west coast and the islands of Hawaii, Powell said that not everyone wants to venture to the classic vacation spots.

"I remember one man who wanted to go to Botswana (in South Africa) several years ago. He was going to live in a village and I think it was a learning process for him," Powell said. "He ended up taking a charter to London, then he went to Johannesburg and he took a 'puddle jumper' to Botswana."

But as long as most Michiganders pick the sunny beaches of the old U.S.A. as a means of escaping the winter doldrums, Powell agreed that a ticket to Botswana, S. Africa, would not be a likely prime city for the airline companies to target their price wars.

Solo Kellner are united

The First Congregation Church in Gibraltar provided the afternoon setting for the Aug. 31 nuptials of Lisa Marie Solo of Romulus and Michael Alan Kellner of Taylor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Solo of Romulus. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Kellner of Taylor.

Flowers of shaded blue and white silk carnations decorated the altar for the double-ring ceremony, officiated by Rev. Joe Phillips. Music was provided by Billie Anne Weiss on the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, chose a silk high lace collar, with a V-neck, ruffled chantilly lace, long puffed applique sleeves with a ruffled chantilly lace cathedral train for the ceremony. A beaded headpiece held her finger tip veil in place and she carried a cascade bouquet of light blue and silk carnations with baby's breath.

Kathy Demmy, friend of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a mauve pink gown with silk carnations of mauve and white with baby's breath on a comb for her hair. She also carried a nosegay of the same color of silk carnations with baby's breath.

The bridesmaids were Debbie Kellner, sister of the groom, and Joanne Akans, aunt of the bride. They wore light blue gowns with blue and white silk carnations with baby's breath on a comb for headpieces. They also carried nosegays of similar floral arrangement.

Serving as best man for the evening was friend of the groom, Bill Williamson. Ushers included John Logan of Taylor, friend of the groom, and Mark Solo of Romulus, brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride chose a light blue silk dress for the event while the mother of the groom chose a royal blue silk dress.

The reception for the newlyweds and 175 guests was hosted by the Gibraltar Community Center in Gibraltar. The newlyweds will make

Yogurt for the health of it

When I began researching this article about yogurt, I was astounded to find that there are literally dozens of companies making yogurt under 300 brand names. According to a recent industry survey, about 25 percent of the people in this country eat yogurt on a weekly basis. Sales are most strong on the coast with metropolitan areas leading the way with a whopping 90 percent of sales. (Says something for yuppie-dom doesn't it?) Eighty-six percent of the American population like their yogurts flavored while 81 percent of Canadians opt for the flavors.

Dieters lead the way with purchases of plain and unflavored yogurts. The sales leader you ask? Strawberry by a wide margin, followed by (in order of preference) cherry, raspberry, blueberry, peach and the rest of the plain and super-fancy ones (i.e. maple-walnut) variations.

Trying to place a birthday on yogurt would have us tracing back the roots of milk because, in essence, yogurt is cultured milk—milk to which bacteria has been added. The best guess is that domestication began about 8000 B.C. somewhere in the Middle East in what is now known as Lebanon. (Lebanon comes from laban, another name for yogurt.

Contrary to popular belief, Dannon was not the first yogurt to appear in North America. The first yogurt arrived here with Lebanese, Greek and American immigrants around the early 1920s. These "mom and pop" operations were eventually "bought out" by the Dannon folks in the early 1930s.

Today, yogurt is made with the beginnings of fresh, whole milk. When the milk arrives at the yogurt plant, it will sit in a holding tank while plant chemists test samples to be certain that the milk will permit the proper growth of yogurt cultures.

Modern cattle are kept healthy with a variety of medications, including antibiotics, which pass through their milk. If the dairy farmer doesn't wait at least three days between the last administration of antibiotics and taking the milk, some antibiotics will be present in the milk and this can keep the bacteria from developing.

Now the milk is readied for the first step—the addition of milk solids, homogenization and pasteurization. The addition of milk solids produces a slightly thicker, more custardy yogurt. Homogenization smooths things out and helps disperse fat particles.

Pasteurization sterilizes the milk by raising the temperature to between 180 and 190 degrees. This temperature is held for 15 minutes and is long enough to destroy most pathological organisms. Then the temperature is lowered to about 114 degrees and the yogurt bacteria is added—equal in the amount to about 1 percent of the milk. Up to this point, all yogurts are more or less the same.

Natural yogurts are then mixed with a fruit preserve or are packaged plain in containers. Fancy yogurt (yogurt that has the fruit mixed in through the addition of stabilizers and thickeners) are then processed more. In addition to helping keep the product thick and the fruit from settling to the bottom, stabilizers and thickeners protect the yogurt on the supermarket shelves for a longer time period. True yogurt lovers will notice a starchy or slick taste from the addition of these stabilizers.

Unfortunately for my taste buds and waistline, no fruit or flavored natural yogurt is really low calorie. However, I have been using the plain, lowfat yogurt as I would sour cream in recipes. When I want it flavored, I will add some fruit that was processed in my food processor. This helps keep the fat content down and if the fruit is sweet enough, it really adds to the taste. It's also much cheaper to make your own fruit-flavored yogurts.

Yogurt is a super source of protein. If you are watching carbohydrates, fruit-flavored yogurts jump dramatically while plain yogurts keep the carbohydrate level down to that of regular milk. Yogurt is a great source of calcium too. By the way Jose, if you think that frozen-yogurt you purchase at the mall is as good for you as the carton stuff, forget it. It's probably full of gelatin, thickeners, emulsifiers and stabilizers, not to mention artificial flavors and colors. As for whether or not the frozen variety will give you the benefits of the natural yogurt in a carton, that depends on whether or not it contains live bacteria. Try asking that of the sweet 17-year-old princess behind the mall counter!

Whatever your preferences—plain, fruity, custard-style, frozen or flaked—it's time you jumped on the bandwagon and tried some yogurt today. Try these interesting recipes using yogurt for an interesting addition to your daily menu routine.

ITALIAN DIP (OR SAUCE)

It took 16 ladies and hundreds of man-hours, but the members of the senior quilting class finally accomplished their intended goal recently when they presented Deputy Director Sylvia Kozorosky with her own personal homemade quilt. The ladies lost one member (Delilah Moore) to death along the way, but remained undeterred. Among those who participated in the ambitious project were (from left) Helen Medeiros, Iliia Caroselli, Mary Arcuragi, Julie Moore and Marguerite Cook. Arcuragi did the actual quilting on the finished project and reportedly needed 72 hours to complete the job.

Golfers open season at Fellows Creek Course

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

One of the surest signs of spring – next to the first robin – is the sight of the first golfers on the greens.

This past weekend, golfers opened the season at Fellows Creek Golf Course in Canton and observed a number of changes in the municipally-owned golf course.

The major change on the grounds is the construction of a new clubhouse which is slated to open on June 1. According to General Manager Scott Thacker, the new clubhouse will have a 300-seat capacity and provide year-round banquet and meeting facilities – the first such facility in the township.

The full-facility clubhouse will include a lounge and pro shop. Cost of the clubhouse is estimated at $800,000 plus parking lot costs, Thacker said.

Upgrading and renovation of the golf course, including the clubhouse costs, is $1.7 million, he said. This includes the addition of nine holes, the construction of seven ponds on the course and other improvements. All, Thacker points out, without cost to the taxpayers.

The municipally-owned golf course is managed by Hilltop Glen Golf Inc., a firm that manages and maintains golf courses and serves as developers and consultants for courses.

Thacker is optimistic about the upcoming season. The 18-hole course has been utilized to capacity and with the addition of the nine holes, he sees a 50 percent boost in the usage of the course by 1987.

“Last year, the township received a lease payment of $221,000,” Thacker said. “We expect that to be close to $400,000 in 1988.” Thacker notes a lot of usage by Canton residents in addition to many golfers from Wayne-Westland, Dearborn Heights and Plymouth. He also has observed an increase in the number of women golfers and in play by senior citizens in recent years.

As the site expands to year-round use, Thacker will schedule winter activities such as cross-country skiing and sledging.

During the summer season, some 35 people are employed at the golf course. Golf pro is Dennis Chall.

Show time!

Teens, families flock to outdoor movies

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

It's just another of the signs of spring – the opening of the Wayne Drive-In!

Teens, parents and toddlers, and even the family dog, pile into the car and enjoy an evening of entertainment in a casual – picnic-type atmosphere.

According to owner Charles Shafer, some of the drive-in fans actually bring picnic lunches in the style of the football tailgate picnickers and set out their lunches on snacks tables beside their vehicles.

“The whole setting is casual,” Shafer said, “and that is the appeal of the drive-in. Mom and Dad can smoke, the kids can snack and it doesn't matter if the youngsters talk or the dog barks – they are in their own car without some other theater-goer sitting behind them to ‘shush’ them.”

Drive-in audiences are about evenly divided between families and teenagers, Shafer noted. Parents of young children often bring the youngsters to the drive-in clad in pajamas and, after they have played on the swings and slides and watched the opening cartoon, the children are ready to sleep and allow Mom and Dad to watch the movie undisturbed. Teens, who have grown up in the casual atmosphere of television watching, enjoy the drive-in where they can snack and talk along with viewing the film, Shafer said.

“And, of course, it is a place for teens to bring their dates,” Shafer said.

There is something new at the drive-in – a choice of speakers or sound on the car radio and there are four screens showing different film choices.

Shafer believes the interest in drive-ins will continue because of the casual atmosphere and low cost of the entertainment.

Eight area drive-ins have closed in recent years, mostly due to fact that they were located on property which was so valuable that they could not produce as much revenue as drive-ins as they could produce in other commercial uses. The Wayne Drive-In was one of the first three in the metropolitan Detroit area – and the only one of the three still in operation, Shafer said.

The Wayne Drive-In was opened on May 20, 1949. No doubt, 37 years later, the first fans of the drive-ins now are the parents, or perhaps, even grandparents of movie fans today.

Second Team 'can do it all'

Multi-faceted is a key word in basketball these days. Gone are the days of the one-dimensional player who can only score or only rebound. In its stead is the versatile ballplayer who can do both - score and rebound and even find the open man with a smart pass or two. A case in point is Xavier McDaniel, now of the Seattle SuperSonics, who won both the NCAA scoring and rebounding titles last year. Another case in point is the Associated Newspapers' All-Area second team, a multi-faceted group of young talented players who can do many jobs on the court.

Leading the way on this squad are co-captains of Inks-ter's 20-3 team, Andre Davis and Barry Hardy. Davis, a 6-3 1-2 junior, who played both guard and forward for Coach George Thompson's Suburban Athletic Conference co-champs, fits this mold exactly. As Thompson said: "He can do it all," and proved it. Davis averaged 22.3 points a game on the offensive end and wiped the glass clean, on the other, averaging 11 caroms per contest.

Thompson was also blessed with a 6-4, 175-pound forward in Barry Hardy who was Inks-ter's "tower of strength on the boards." Averaging 12 rebounds a game, Hardy asserted himself on defense, blocking an average of three shots a game. Hardy, who is much sought after by college scouts, also excelled on the offensive end, scoring 19.8 points a game and was an excellent complement to Davis. Romulus was led by Terry Mills and Steve Glenn all year, but every team needs that third man to balance it out, and the Eagles had him in 6-6 junior forward Juan Street. Street was there when the Eagles needed him most, coming up with key baskets and rebounds, keeping the state title winners in the thick of the race all the way. He averaged 10.3 points a game and helped Mills on the boards, collecting seven caroms per game. When teams concentrated on Mills, Street was always there to haunt the opposition. "Street is an outstanding shooter and rebounder," said Al Wilkerson, Romulus High Coach. "And next year he will be even greater."

Another young man who has multi-faceted talents is Joel Mies of Plymouth Canton. Mies, described by Canton mentor Tom Niemi, "has done an outstanding job. He was the sparkplug that kept us going. Mies led Canton back from an 0-5 start to a 10-10 finish in the Western Lakes Activities Association. He scored 325 points for a 15.4 per game average. He also was a "hawker" on defense, picking off 64 opposition passes and blocking 15 shots. All this from a 6-1 guard, who truly was a "leader."

Another leader was Chris Grantham of Belleville, who led the Tigers from obscurity of a 4-17 season in 1984-85 to a rejuvenated 13-11 record this year, plus a trip to the regional final before bowing out to Romulus. The junior guard averaged nearly 18 points a game this year and kept Coach Leon Birdyshaw smiling all-year and probably will do the same next year, too. You can bet that you haven't heard the last from these prep stars.

ing the best in the sport and in sports-manship." Unfortunately, in Romulus's greatest triumph also comes its biggest loss. Coach Wilkerson announced earlier this season that he was bowing out at the end of the season as Romulus's head coach. He said that that decision is irreversible. "There is a time in one's life when you have to look at your priorities," Wilkerson said. "I have done this, and I have decided to spend more time with my family and children and also become one of the best if not the best high school counselors in the state." Knowing Wilkerson, he will probably also attain that goal.

Mills to play in McDonald's cage benefit classic Country's top players to meet April 11 in Joe Louis Arena

Terry Mills, who guided Romulus to its first Class A state basketball championship, will be one of three Michigan prep cage stars featured in the prestigious McDonald's All-American High School game. The McDonald's All-American High School Basketball team will come to Detroit's Joe Louis Arena on Friday, April 11. Mills is joined by two other Michigan stars - Derrick Coleman of Detroit Northern High School fame, and Anthony Penleton of Flint Northwestern High School. Mills and Pendleton managed to test each other during the state's semi-final round recently in East Lansing where the 6-9 Mills led the Eagles past the two-time defending state champs, 69-58. Mills is a two-time prep All-American who averaged 28.3 points per game and holds the

They skate like champs

Hockey champs crowned

After capturing their divisional championship, the Garden City Bantam "A" hockey team brought the curtains down on the 1985-86 campaign by winning the coveted Adray playoff championship. The championship matched skaters from Birmingham with the local club which managed to shut out their rivals 3-0 thanks to a superlative performance in the net by goalie Kevin Beals. The champs got on the scoreboard when Joe Curcuro found the range with the first of two of his goals for the evening. The champs received their third and final goal of the year from Mike D'Antonio with James Hanshaw receiving credit for two assists and Rob Malczynski and Kevin Bridges getting credit for the other. The Bantams are coached by Mario Contreras whose staff includes assisted coaches Micahel Curylo and Dan Anger.

dan's dogs

by dan a. morris

One of the best gifts you can give your child is a dog. The love and responsibility combined with pet care develops character in all of us, not just children, but the bond between child and dog is a beautiful sight to see and an unbeatable combination.

Now, don't be alarmed at the next statement, but those of you who already own a dog and have recently had a baby or are expecting one, can do the reverse—give the baby to the dog. What we are aiming for is a dog that is not jealous of the new baby and parents who are comfortable with the dog near the infant.

The word "give" is implied, and not intended to be taken literally! When you arrive home from the hospital carrying your new baby don't expect your dog to be too happy about it. After all, you have been gone for at least a week. He's missed you and has resented your absence and to top it all off, here you come carrying "competition" into the house.

Instead of pushing your dog away, say to him, "Look Rover, I've got something for you. Here's 'your' baby, so take good care of it." What happens is, if you sound sincere, the dog won't become jealous but, instead, will be pleased with his surprise present. Let him sniff the baby. (Believe me, he will not harm the infant if he sniffs at the child while you're holding it.) This relaxed attitude will spill over onto the dog and he, too, will be calm and gentle around the baby.

Another important thing to remember is during feeding time be sure to have the dog sit at your side or lay at your feet while feeding the baby. You could even give the dog his favorite treat at the same time.

When the baby graduates to a highchair for meals the dog will save you the trouble of sweeping up dropped cereal because he'll probably eat the crumbs before you have a chance to reach for the broom.

When the child begins walking, many a large breed dog has been used as an aid as the baby holds onto the dog's shoulder while taking those first unsteady steps.

Just as you would never allow the dog to harm your child in any way, remember to caution your youngster to treat the dog with kindness and gentleness, also.

Relax and watch the love grow between your child and dog.

Romulus is welcomed to Downriver conference

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

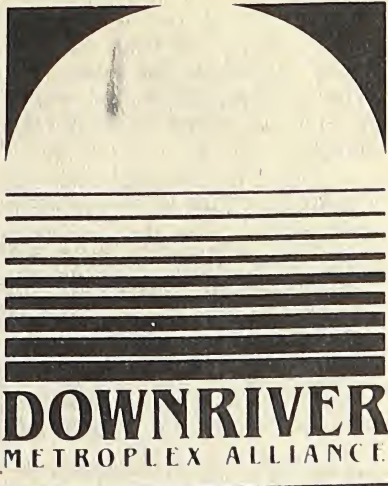

Although Romulus is a new member of the 17-community Downriver Metroplex Alliance, it was well represented at the Downriver Business Expo '86 last weekend in Allen Park.

Among the 160 exhibitors at the Allen Park Civic Arena was Saw & Specialty Corp., 10555 Shook Road, Romulus.

Fred Lorenz, president of the family-owned business, had one of the largest exhibits at the Expo displaying some of the large industrial saws which his company distributes.

Lorenz said he was pleased with the response his display received at the weekend event. He reported some "good leads" in addition to a successful effort to make the business community and the public aware of what his firm has to offer.

The event not only attracted area visitors, Lorenz said, but it also drew business people from a wide area to view the exhibits. Lorenz said he had sent out some 1,800 invitations, including many in the northern suburbs, to "let people know what business advantages we have in this area."

"Lorenz, a lifelong Romulus resident, viewed his participation in the Expo."

Lorenz, a lifelong Romulus resident, viewed his participation in the Expo as an excellent opportunity to promote his home area as well as his own business.

Saw & Specialty was founded in 1919 by Lorenz' father and was located on the west side of Detroit until 1981 when it moved to its present Romulus location. The firm is distributor for industrial saws which include band saw machinery, circular saw machinery, saw blades, supplies and accessories. Lorenz concentrates heavily on Michigan-made machinery such as W.F. Wells and Sons, Parma Mfg., Dake/Johnson and Kalamazoo Industries. The company also is a distributor for Behringer heavy duty production bandsaws.

Other exhibitors from Romulus included St. Lawrence Press Co., 12500 South Wayne Road; Johnson Smith Graphics, 11334 Hunt St.; Inland Waters Pollution Control, Inc., 24354 King, and Central Distributors of Beer, Inc., 28100 Gorsuch Ave. Jan Signs of Wayne also displayed their products at the Expo.

More than 30,000 people attended the event which was chaired by Dewitt Henry, executive director of the Downriver Metroplex Alliance; Steve Stieler, president of Wyandotte Savings Bank, and Robert Taylor, president of National Bank of Wyandotte Taylor.

Wayne County Chief Executive William Lucas (left) welcomed Yazaki Group President Yasuhiko Yazaki at the opening celebration of the expanded headquarters facility of American Yazaki Corp. in Canton. The 210,000-square-foot American facility consolidates the office, sales and distribution operations previously conducted in four separate locations.

Arbor Drugs doubles size

Eugene Applebaum, president and chairman of the Board of Arbor Drugs Inc., announced plans for a new store in Belleville recently.

The Arbor of Belleville store, currently under construction at I-94 and Belleville Road, will replace the existing Arbor store located at 31 E. Huron River Drive. Construction is scheduled for completion this Spring.

According to Applebaum, the new 10,000-square-foot store, more than double the size of the current Arbor store, will enable Arbor to offer Belleville customers the full line of Arbor products and services, including over 1,000 private label items - vitamins, health and beauty aids and over-the-counter products. The store interior will be designed in a typical Arbor Drug layout featuring a wide center promotional aisle. In addition, the store will feature a broad line of generic drugs, the Arbortech computerized pharmacy system, "Picture/Picture" and other Arbor merchandising features.

The Michigan-based Arbor Drugs Inc., headquartered in Troy, MI, is one of the largest privately-owned retail drug companies in the United States. Arbor has 46 stores located throughout Southeastern Michigan.
